

Michael Davis is an employee of Spirax Sarco, Inc. A worldwide manufacturer of steam traps, temperature and pressure controls, metering devices, level controls and other steam related heat transfer products.

He has held various sales and marketing positions within the company spanning over 30 years with his most recent assignment as the Mid Atlantic Sales Region's Technical Training Manager/Technical Analyst. He has assisted many customers in a wide array of industries in the design and engineering of steam system solutions to improve plant efficiencies of steam energy usage.

Over the years he has contributed to several articles published in various trade journals. He received a B.A. degree from Moravian College and resides in the Lehigh Valley area.